

Google Student
Ambassador Program

Be a
Google Student
Ambassador

Are you the go-to person for anything tech at your college?

Do you get a kick out of explaining AI tools to your friends before anyone else even tries them?

Want to be known as that student who brought Google Gemini to campus?

Here's your chance.

Google is officially inviting student leaders to join the Google Student Ambassador Program — a national initiative to empower undergrads to lead AI adoption through Gemini, Google's cutting-edge AI assistant.

Why This Program Matters

This isn't just about free schwag or adding another line to your resume. This is your opportunity to lead AI conversations where they matter most — your campus.

As AI reshapes how we learn, work, and create, Google's looking for students who are excited to help their peers understand and explore Gemini through learning sessions, workshops, and real-life use cases.

And yes — there are some sweet rewards too.

What You'll Get to Do as a Student Ambassador

Once selected, you'll represent Google and Gemini at your college by:

Hosting Peer Learning Sessions

Teach your friends how to use Gemini for writing, coding, studying, or ideating.

Running Interactive Events & Workshops

Organize hands-on activities like AI-powered quiz nights, prompt battles, or content creation jams.

Building a Campus AI Community

Become the trusted voice on your campus for all things Gemini and AI innovation.

Helping Google Understand Users

Your feedback, experiments, and observations will help Google improve Gemini's campus use.

✔ Are You Eligible?
